

allowing general use of cellular phones on flights should not be allowed. Between the noise of the airplane and the fact most people's hearing is somewhat impaired on flights due to changes in air pressure, cell phone users would end up yelling into their phones to think they are being heard. And I for one do not want to be sitting next to a yelling cell phone user.

I have no problem with airlines having a good old-fashioned telephone booth on board for cell phone users. But that could lead to cell phone rage when one person abuses the time they spend in the booth.
